INTRODUCTION

Section 10(2)(f) of the Planning and Development Act 2000 (as amended) states that the Development Plan shall include objectives for: “The protection of structures, or parts of structures, which are of special architectural, historical, archaeological, artistic, cultural, scientific, social or technical interest.”

Section 51(1) of the Planning and Development Act 2000 (as amended) indicates the rationale for providing a Record of Protected Structures, stating that:

“For the purpose of protecting structures, or parts of structures, which form part of the architectural, heritage and which are of special architectural, historical, archaeological, artistic, cultural, scientific, social or technical interest, every development plan shall include a record of protected structures, and shall include in that record every structure which is, in the opinion of the planning authority, of such interest within its functional area.”

These structures play an integral part in the life of County Clare and the daily lives of its citizens. These structures are often inhabited or used as places of work, commerce, worship, education, recreation, and contribute positively to the character our towns, villages and countryside.

Accordingly, this Record of Protected Structures has been prepared for the Clare County Development Plan 2023-2029. This document identifies and describes the details of all existing Protected Structures in the County.

In addition, objectives for the protection of such structures are included in the Volume 1 Written Statement of the Clare County Development Plan 2023-2029.

What is a Protected Structure?

A protected structure is a building or other feature, (such as a bridge, memorial or castle), which, in the opinion of Clare County Council, is of such special architectural, artistic, archaeological, cultural, social, scientific or technical interest that it should be afforded legal protection so that its intrinsic value can be appreciated by future generations. Such structures can range from the humblest thatched cottage to the largest country house.

Under the Planning and Development Act 2000 (as amended), a Protected Structure incorporates the following: -

- The interior of the structure,

- The land lying within the curtilage of the structure
- Any other structures lying within the curtilage and their interiors, and
- All fixtures and features, which form part of the interior or exterior of any structure(s), referred to in subparagraph (a) or (c).

“where a structure is protected, the protection includes the structure, its interior and the land within its curtilage (including their interiors) and all fixtures and features which form part of the interior or exterior of all these structures.” (Architectural Heritage Protection - Guidelines for Planning Authorities, Department of Environment, Heritage and Local Government 2004)

Provision is also made for protection to be extended to include features such as gate lodges, gazebos, etc., which have passed into new ownership through the break-up of an estate or the division of a property.

How do I find out if a structure is protected?

All protected structures in County Clare are listed in this Record of Protected Structures. Further clarification may be sought from the Planning Authority.

Responsibilities

Under the provisions of Section 58(1) of the Planning and Development Act 2000 (as amended) “each owner and each occupier shall, to the extent consistent with the rights and obligations arising out of their respective interests in a protected structure or a proposed protected structure, ensure that the structure, or any element of it which contributes to its special architectural, historical, archaeological, artistic, cultural, scientific, social or technical interest, is not endangered”. Section 58(4) further indicates that “Any person who without lawful authority, causes damage to a protected structure or a proposed protected structure shall be guilty of offence”

Advice

The Planning Authority is in a position to offer advice, guidance, help and information to the stakeholders in the county on its built heritage, be they owners, occupiers, auctioneers, architects, engineers, solicitors, builders or members of the public.

Development affecting a Protected Structure:

Due to a number of factors, not least the fact that many modern building materials and techniques are often harmful to the fabric of old buildings, due consideration must be given to the use of appropriate materials and methods when undertaking works on Protected Structures. Special provisions have been made in the Planning and Development Act 2000 (as amended) to address the issue of developments that affect protected structures. These provisions include the removal of the usual categories of ‘exempted development’.

In order to undertake works on a Protected Structure, an owner or occupier must be in possession of either:

- Planning Permission – if the proposed works will materially alter the character of the structure.
- Section 57 Declaration – This declaration is available from the Planning Authority of Clare County Council and can identify the nature and scope of works that may be undertaken which will not affect the character of the building. Any works to a Protected Structure, which would be normally considered to be ‘exempted development’, will require planning permission or a Section 57 Declaration. Such works include extensions to the rear, side or front or internal changes.

Planning Permission Procedures for Protected Structures

Where an application relates to a development which would consist or comprise the carrying out of works to a protected structure or proposed protected structure (including the grounds in which the structure is located) newspaper advertisements and site notices must state that fact. Planning Applications for such developments must be accompanied by sufficient plans, drawings and particulars to show how the proposed development would affect the character of the structure. It is not possible to apply for outline planning permission for development work on a protected structure.

Where a Protected Structure is also listed as a Recorded Monument the National Monuments Service must be informed in writing, detailing the proposed work and how it will be undertaken and completed. No work shall commence unless and until the National Monuments Service have given their consent. (National Monuments (Amendment) Act, 1994: Section 12).

	Summary description: Stone built seawall of local thin bedded sandstone built as famine relief scheme with later sections of repair evident. Walls are constructed from roughly coursed cut sandstone blocks. A now blocked arched opening at the northern end of the wall displays cut-stone voussoirs and there is a section of rock faced cut-sandstone walls near the slipway with a flight of inset cut-sandstone steps nearby (just below Wellington Square). The wall to the road appears to be later than the sea wall and is constructed from uncoursed rubble stone with large sandstone blocks laid as coping. During the 20 th century much of the central section of the seawall was added to forming a promenade and green spaces. This later section also displays rubble stone walls with a base batter. Badly damaged in storm 2014 – repaired 2015/2016. Categories of special interest: Architectural, Historical, Social, Technical

Summary description: Slipway, built c.1900, extending steeply from rocky shoreline down to sea on south side of Farrihy Bay. Comprising finely built sidewalls of coursed rock-faced sandstone which display a battered base. Section of north face of wall largely concrete rendered. Inner face of walls composed of uncoursed random rubble, Remains of lime and later concrete pointing survive in places. The walkway is infilled with rubble made up of the local sandstone which has the remains of a concrete rendered walkway. Walkway is largely eroded away. Sidewalls measure approx. 0.60m thick. Slipway itself measures 4.9m wide by approximately 40m long. This slipway is located in a visually stunning location overlooking Farrihy Bay. The seashore in this area is comprised of exposed beds of sandstone rising at an angle from the ground. This stone probably provided the building stone for the slipway. Summary description: Stone slipway, built c.1900, leading steeply from roadside down to beach. Constructed from local thin-bedded sandstone with sidewalls of coursed rock-faced sandstone blocks with kerb-stones comprised of long narrow upright sections also rock-faced. Cobbling still intact to surface consists of narrow lengths of worn sandstone. Some later concrete pointing visible in places. A modern aluminum railing is fitted on one side of the slipway. The slipway is flanked on either side by the sea wall, which also displays rock-facing. This slipway is not marked on the first edition (1842) O.S. map. It is marked Slip on the revised 1915 O.S. map. Categories of special interest: Architectural, Detail/Design

Summary description: Detached single-bay single-storey former boat house, built c.1810, now in ruins. Appears to have had a slate roof which was then replaced with a stone slate roof of thin sandstone flags, a number of which are still in situ at eaves level. Broken fragments of glazed terracotta ridge tiles to interior. Evidence of mortar bedding to slates and stone slates. Unusual to find limestone in this area. Both limestone kneelers appear to be reused window jambs possibly originating from the now demolished 15th century Freagh Castle. No associated slipway or pier visible, immediately north of the boathouse is a stream leading down to a stony beach and narrow inlet. Boathouse is marked and named Boat Ho' on the first edition (1842) O.S. Map. Recorded Monument CL030-002. Categories of special interest: Architectural, Archaeological, Historical

The pier is constructed of square rubble limestone and crenellations have been added to its eastern end. The company also constructed a hotel to the west of the harbour which closed in the 1860s when the steamers ceased to use the Shannon”. The inner harbour was substantially altered and enlarged in the 1970s. Very little if any original material survives from this period. Late 19th century pier built after original harbour is still intact. Built of squared rubble limestone. Pointing has eroded away some kerbstones at west end of pier but still visible otherwise. Masked by later concrete repairs. Parapet wall of rubble stone to east end with later mass concrete extension of wall to southeast side of pier and later mass concrete crenellations. Two floating pontoons to north west side of pier walkway covered in grass to west end and largely graveled to east end. No steps visible to main pier. Steps still intact at west end of pier. Corrugated iron boathouse at entrance to harbour possibly that which is shown on the 1920s OS map. Categories of special interest: Architectural, Detail/Design, Technical	ITM: 578140 ; 688453 Map: Volume 2 Map reference: I5
